

Dear MEP

Please during the current Strasbourg session add your name to the Declaration “on freedom of thought, conscience and religion, the right to education and the prohibition of discrimination in relation to religious symbols” tabled by Sophie in’t Veld MEP. A copy is given overleaf.

In November the European Court of Human Rights delivered a clearly argued judgement¹ against Italy for its compulsory display of the crucifix in all State school classrooms. The court ruled that this violated the Convention right of parents “to ensure [their children’s education] in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions”. It was clear from the judgement that this ruling was in conformity with Italy’s own constitution, which has been secular since 1985.

Some Italian politicians reacted with fury (the defence minister Ignazio La Russa ranted non-stop on television for four minutes²) and a number of Italian MEPs³ have tabled a Declaration calling for “freedom to display religious symbols representative of a people’s culture and identity on public premises”.

Sophie in ’t Veld’s Declaration endorses the Court’s judgement in the name of separation of church and state, stating that “public institutions, at the national and EU level, should represent all citizens, regardless of belief, religion or philosophy, without discrimination”.

Please add your name to this Declaration, thereby upholding the authority of the European Court of Human Rights and the secular nature of the European Union, since secularism (in the sense of official neutrality on questions of religion and belief) is far and away the best guarantor of freedom of conscience.

Yours sincerely
